~~About A Mountain is quirky little book. In it, John D'Agata takes a look Las Vegas, Yucca Mountain and a teenager's suicide leap off the top of a Las Vegas landmark, the Stratosphere. Exactly what ties these things together is never made entirely clear, but half the fun of reading About A Mountain is pondering that enigmatic mystery.~~

~~About a Mountain by John D'Agata—Goodreads~~

~~About a Mountain is as fact-laden as any John McPhee book, but where McPhee works to clarify domains of fact generally understood only by experts, D'Agata focuses on the insufficiency of facts as vehicles for understanding contemporary reality. He draws our attention to the conflicts and gaps in expert opinion and to the terminal slipperiness of facts...and the end result is one of the most convincing metaphors for contemporary American reality that I have come across in any recent piece ...~~

~~"In About a Mountain, his vivid, lyric, book-length essay on Las Vegas, John D'Agata presents a city caught between two very different but related kinds of disaster . . . The terrifying conclusion to which D'Agata leads us is that the question of suicide is just as thorny, vortex-like, and fundamentally unanswerable as the question of the most dangerous waste product of the world's most technologically advanced nation."—~~

~~I wanted to say a little about John D'Agata's new book, About a Mountain, even though it wasn't published as an essay in a literary magazine, to me, it is still an essay albeit one in book-length form. What makes it still an essay is the way it accumulates information after focusing intently on one laser-fine point.~~
