"Using knowledge gained in fifty-plus years at the cutting edge of public finance, Sigal clears the smoke and moves the mirrors to let the rest of us see how it is done.... When they say it is not about the money, they are wrong. It always is. And the ultimate question is "whose money?" - Majorie Smith, Chair, New Hampshire House Judiciary Committee; former Chair, NH House Finance Committee and Joint Fiscal Committee Shades of Public Finance Vol. 1 lifts the curtain on aspects of American civil and financial underpinnings that most people know little about. Local water treatment systems, state university campuses, roads, parks and many other features of our cities and states have been built with local control and local decision-making because imaginative figures like Richard Sigal found ways to turn community assets into cash through bonds. Sigal explains in clear language how bonds are structured, who gets rich, who gets stuck and how politics impacts bond financing. This book will answer these questions and more. •Why the Patriots didn't move to Hartford; •Why bankruptcy and a city manager in Detroit may not have helped the city; •How we quietly abandoned the principles of Alexander Hamilton in 2016; •How municipal bonds really work; •And who really gets rich from your taxes and bonds. Sigal highlights the frightening prospect of centralized, federal control of local communities infrastructure and growth because municipal bankruptcy has become an acceptable strategy in difficult financial times, despite workable options that preserve local creditworthiness. "A great read for history and to grasp the importance of public finance experts in meeting everyday needs." --Thomas Ritter, Chair, UCONN Board of Trustees; past Speaker of the Connecticut House of Representatives

Public Finance remains the premier textbook on the normative theory of government policy, with the third edition propelling into the twenty-first century its examination of what government ought to be doing instead of what it is doing. The welfare aspects of public economics receive extensively renewed examination in this third edition. With four new chapters and other significant revisions, it presents detailed and comprehensive coverage of theoretical literature, empirical work, environmental issues, social insurance, behavioral economics, and international tax issues. With increased emphasis on the European Union, it is rigid enough for use by PhDs while being accessible to students less well trained in math. Moves skillfully from explaining normative theory to applying it in mathematically compact and precise terms Adds new chapters on social insurance, medical care, social security pensions, behavioral public economics, and international public finance Includes new pedagogical supplements, including end-of-chapter questions and answers Emphasizes European examples

"In Texas, there are 4,900 parcels of property within 500 feet of the border....The entire process of "eminent domain" — the legal term for government taking private property — along the border makes a sham of the Constitution's requirement that 'private property (not) be taken for public use, without just compensation.'" -InsideSources, "Building the Wall Using Eminent Domain Hurts Americans" Shades of Public Finance Vol. 2 takes readers through some of the most pressing concerns of the day. Welcome to learning about these important issues in public finance: •clean water, •solid waste disposal, •highways, utilities, open space, •gambling and native Americans, •public authorities, •reciprocal tax immunity, and •eminent domain. You may not realize it, but these topics reside in the shadows of your everyday life and budget. "Whether you write the tax laws or pay the taxes that result, function in the private sector or the public, or care about potholes or wastewater, you will find Sigal's stories behind the stories fascinating. When they say it is not about the money, they are wrong. It always is. And the ultimate question is "whose money?" Sigal explains it clearly." - Majorie Smith, Chair, New Hampshire House Judiciary Committee; former Chair, NH House Finance Committee and Joint Fiscal Committee
